MAY 2011

From the director's desk

Dear Friends,

WE THREE

I have authored a children's book – WE THREE. This is the first in a series of eleven more that I hope to write

I started writing this series in 2002 but didn't have an illustrator so it was set aside. Two months ago, now, by chance [I don't believe in chance] I received an email from somebody about illustrating children's books. We connected and bonded and now there is a book for the world to see and enjoy!

WE THREE was written to encourage awareness and equality of ALL with or without a mental or physical challenge, as well as enhance the imagination and enjoyment for all readers.

See the flyer on the next page!

THANK YOU to everyone who has helped get us
through another month!

WE THREE is a series of children's stories about three young boys and their adventures together. The "Helicopter Ride" is the first with several books to follow throughout the year.

The stories consist of three major characters. One has Down syndrome [mental challenge], another is wheelchair bound [physical challenge]. The third boy does not have a disability but rather is often teased because of his red hair and freckles. The wheelchair has a significant role in each book which contributes to the solution to every situation the boys encounter.

WE THREE – Helicopter Ride

This first book is about how the three boys met; their adventure in a helicopter; and what happens when they discover the wheelchair was not properly fastened.
